

Hi there,

It's not long before the famous roar erupts at Cheltenham as the flag falls for the Supreme Novices' Hurdle on the opening day of the Festival.

It remains to be seen whether the up-and-rising star Samcro lines up in that race or for the Ballymore later in the week, but there is sure to be an Irish fancy lurking there somewhere with the home team likely to be headed by the gutsy Kalashnikov.

I have not yet decided which of the 'bankers' I will be taking on – Buveur D'Air, Footpad, Apple's Jade, Altior and Samcro are all currently odds-on for their preferred races as I write this in mid-February.

We all know that something usually comes to the aid of the bookmakers – as perfectly illustrated when Annie Power took that last-flight tumble in 2015 thereby saving the layers a fortune in multiple combinations on the Willie Mullins team.

I am sure people will again be stepping in with combination bets on their perceived bankers. I prefer to take them on if I can, trying to incorporate many of the concessionary benefits offered by the bookmakers through the week.

My team is now busy working away on their appointed assignments for the Bulletin Book, while subscribers to the Cheltenham Package will receive my Daily Communiques in the week leading up to the Festival and also Supplements, available overnight for each of the four days. This season, for the first time, there will be a two-day declaration timescale for Cheltenham, which means I will be able to give you news of likely gambles earlier than in the past.

As usual I am looking forward in particular to the handicaps. A few names have already come my way, including one horse for the County Hurdle, with others expected to become the subject of support provided the ground is right.

After over four decades of providing a service for Cheltenham our tried and tested portfolio caters for all your needs, ranging from the traditional Bulletin Book to mobile data and internet outlets.

Please don't hesitate to contact us if there is anything we can help you with. I hope we do well for you all!

Bye for now
